MARKETING OF GRAIN.

The Council of the Board of Trade took up the question of unsatisfactory markets for grain at Red Deer, and we are pleased to note that it is bearing fruit, and hope for better rates for Red Deer in consequence.

The following letter was received by President Welliver from James Speakman, President of the United Farmers of Alberta, a few days ago:

Dear Mr. Welliver,—
I heartily thank you for calling my attention to complaints about the marketing conditions for farmers in the Red Deer district. I am at once putting the matter into the hands of the President of our Elevator Co., and I am sure he will thoroughly investigate the complaints and will remedy them if he finds them well founded. As I have to go to Winnipeg tomorrow, I will not be able to report more fully until after my return.

Yours truly,

JAS. SPEAKMAN, President.

In connection with the above matter, another letter was received by the President of the Board of Trade yesterday as follows:

Calgary, Alberta, Nov. 6th, 1915.
Mr. R. B. Welliver,
Pres. Board of Trade,
Red Deer, Alta.

Dear Sir,—

We are in receipt of a letter from Mr. Speakman, President of the U.F.A. here in Calgary, enclosing copy of letter received from you with regard to the prices we are paying at our elevator at Red Deer.

We have read this letter carefully, and in reply will say that we will send one of our travellers to Red Deer very shortly to look into this matter carefully, and can assure you that our aim is to give the farmers at that station the very best service. We are endeavoring to pay the highest price possible for grain in our elevator, but we are going to look into the situation carefully, and we can promise you that we will have the case thoroughly investigated, and we will try to compete with Penhold and Lacombe with regard to the prices that are being paid in the local elevators.

Yours very truly,
Alberta Farmers' Co-op. Elevator Co., Ltd.

J. A. Moore, Superintendent.

The Red Deer Agricultural Society are in receipt of a cheque for $2560.00 from the Hon. Martin Burrell, Minister of Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont., covering the special grant given by the Dominion Government for Red Deer's 1915 Fair. This grant was secured mainly through the instrumentality of Mr. J. F. Day, the popular president of the association, who has left no stone unturned to make the association a success. Had it not been for this grant, there would have probably been no fair this year. As it is, several thousands of dollars have been distributed among the stock men of this district and the fair was a pronounced success.

QUARTER OF A MILLION.

The Government's call for 100,000 additional recruits is wholly in keeping ing with its splendid record ever since the Kaiser mobilized his armies on the Belgian border. Several days before the British Government actually declared war against Germany Sir Robert Borden cabled the Imperial authorities, placing at their disposal the resources of the Dominion in men and means.

From that day the Prime Minister has allowed no considerations of constitutional rule to stand in his way. In order that no precious time might be lost he assumed the role of dictator and acted without authority of Parliament. From the outset he and his colleagues have shown such a remarkable initiative and organizing capacity that, despite hampering attacks from extreme Liberals and extreme newspapers, Canada has done magnificently.

The speed with which the First Contingent was got away, the high character of the contingent, and its immortal record in Europe, astonished the world. From the first, recruits have been accepted and drilled as fast as equipment could be provided. Under any other leadership that we can think of Canada would not have made half so good a showing as stands to its credit for the first year and a quarter of the war. The Dominion will soon have raised $50,000,000—enormously a notable achievement for a country containing 5,000,000 people of British blood.

A SIGET FOR GODS.

Toronto News: An unforgettable record is that of the chief Liberator of this province, and this country. When German soldiers stepped into Belgium on that portentous Sunday some "able editors" were acquainted with themselves. They were forced by red facts to admit that their theories were empty dreams, that their reading of history was a waste of time, that their prophecies were just wind. Today the Globe cries: "If every man in Britain with definite knowledge of the German plotting had declared his knowledge from the houseposts, the gigantic villainy would not have been a possibility."

What men with definite knowledge neglected to warn the nation? The Globe dragged itself into in-sensibility with the hashish of pacifism, and could not hear any one of a thousand warnings. Now, wakened, it inquires why no one spoke? Why did Mr. Asquith refuse to seal down the building programme of the navy? Did he not say in the house of commons that any such action would be taken at grave peril? Did he not say that in view of the outlook on the continent the safety of the country compelled a heavy programme? Did the Globe ever hear of a Socialist named Robert Blatchford, who visited Germany to investigate the rumor of war preparation? He returned convinced that an attack was meditated against Great Britain, and gave his personal conclusions in the London press.

Lord Roberts knew the danger and read an appeal to the country. The Liberal press denounced him as a foolish old man.

THE SERBIAN SOLDIER.

Stanley Naylor, in the Daily Chronicle, London, England, recently wrote a splendid article on the bravery and devotion of the Serbian "Tommy Atkins." He concluded his article with the following story: "Before the superior forces of the enemy on one occasion a Serbian regiment had to retire. Of the men wearing the machine-guns all but one were killed and wounded; but this man, instead of withdrawing with his comrades, continued to work his gun with such fiendish energy that at last the advancing enemy, not realizing that he stood alone, and fearing a trap, retired in their turn. And so the situation was saved by the courage of one man. His exploit was duly reported to the general, who sent for him next day and said, 'You're a terrible fellow. What's this I hear of you? They tell me it was a regular massacre. How many men did you kill?' The gunner, much perturbed, stammered out his belief that certainly well over a hundred men must have fallen victims to his machine gun.

"Well," said the general, frowning, 'there's nothing for it but to make you a corporal.' 'Oh, general,' exclaimed the man, who had expected some kind of punishment. 'And now, Corporal—, I make you a sergeant.' 'Oh, general,' gasped the man, speechless with astonishment. 'And now, Sergeant—, the general went on, 'I make you a lieutenant.' The new officer burst into tears. 'And now,' cried the general, 'now embrace me!'

(Edmonton Journal)

It has been persistently claimed by the Opposition press that the government's war taxation measures were a failure. The figures for the seven months to November 1 show how much astray this claim is. There has been an increase in revenue of nearly seven million dollars over the corresponding months last year. Nor is the charge that economy in ordinary expenditure is not being exercised sustained. This is down nine million dollars. We should have noted the last of the talk about war taxes that are not for war purposes. If the government is to be criticized at all, it is for not making the present taxation burdens heavier, for depending too much on its borrowings to meet war expenses. It may be at the next session find it advisable to increase the present imposts. Then watch for fierce denunciations from those who are now urging that it is not spending enough on the war. We ought to be brought to understand that the money necessary to do our share in fighting Germany must come out of our own pockets.

HELP WANTED.

Mr. De Angelis, the Italian Consul at Edmonton, sends forth an urgent request for aid in collecting furs for the Italian troops on active service in high altitudes, who are already suffering from the intense cold of the mountain ranges.

An appeal has been made by Dr. Luigi Verastri, President of the Central Committee of Aid for the Italian Troops on Active Service, through Lady Aberdeen, to the National Council of Women of Canada, begging friends and allies in Great Britain, and especially in Canada, to help collect furs for the troops, and this work has been cordially endorsed by Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Cornwall. Dr. Verastri says: "The painful experience of war teaches us that among troops engaged at high altitudes, serious and irreparable loss is caused by frost-bite. In order to reduce as far as possible such suffering and mutilation we must provide those of our soldiers exposed to the risk of frost-bite with fur, even of a rough description. All those who have not the chance to offer themselves for the defence of their country, but who with heart and hand help their brothers at the front, and remove their drawbacks and sufferings, may not only enjoy the satisfaction of having done a duty fulfilled, but on the longest-for day of victory, they, too, will know the personal joy and the secret pride of having, as it were, helped to fight, and win side by side with the heroes and martyrs who fought for us."

Work parties in Italy are stitching together skins of all kinds to make sleeping bags, etc. The most easily adapted and suitable would naturally be such skins as sheep, goat and lamb skins, but many persons might conceivably help now in this work by giving old furs, such as coats, skin rugs, travelling or carriage furs of any sort.

Let all, then, who have any old furs which they can do without, make it a sacred duty to give them to that large-hearted generosity which knows no limit.

THE SACRIFICES OF MOTHERS.

(The Ottawa Journal)

Thousands of mothers in all parts of the empire are sorrowing for the loss of one or more sons, whose vacant chairs in the home cannot be filled. The unselfishness and devotion of any mother who gives even one son a unselfishness can show, but in some instances the sacrifice has been of more than one son, and the hardship correspondingly greater. The following is an extract from a private letter received in Ottawa from our far west, names being withheld:

"Up in this far north we have one case where a mother with her daughter of fourteen years travelled 1,500 miles overland and by canoe, to see the last of her four sons, who was among a draft of the 44th regiment from Saskatoon. She had only a few minutes to speak with him. He was 17 years of age, but was bound to go and seek relief for the loss of the other three brothers, who had gone with the first contingent and were killed during the severe fighting in France, one being awarded a V.C., which was forwarded from the Horse Guards to her as the next of kin, and this was awaiting her at Saskatoon. She takes this back to the far north as the only memento of her four sturdy Scotch sons; and in her little shack at Inuvik, a LaCrosse she will lead a lonely life with the girl of fourteen and the decoration from her kind to her eldest boy for valor, and a small pension of ten pounds per annum which it carries with it."

To correspond with the above, let us quote the following from a recent issue of the London Times: In a speech at a recruiting meeting at Reading, Lieutenant-General Sir B. Bethune told of an old Cornish lady who had six sons serving in the army, five of whom had been killed. She wrote to General Bethune: "Do give me back the sixth." In his reply he pointed out the need of every man at the present time, and she promptly replied "Please keep him, then."

Condor Cuttings

Well, the weather has sure been dandy.

And the fall work is nearly done;

And I wonder if the condors are

From the morn till the set of sun.

Tom Peel has got a grain bin

As big as all outdoors;

And he's going to have a motor car

And a man to do the chores.

Our good friend Norman Eastman

Has returned from far away,

And he is working on the land again.

He looks thinner, by the way.

The store is nearly finished;

It looks good at any rate.

And I wonder if McEneaney

Raise the prices, and say freight.

It's what we've all been used to;

It's Macdonnell's word of weight.

When we kick about the prices—

"My good man, it's just the freight."

McEneaney got a good excuse:

The city rails are high.

The sewerage pipes and city lights,

And street cars so close by.

All these things are very trying

To a business man's career;

But we trust they won't affect our store,

And make the food stuffs dear.

The James Smith threshing outfit

Has been working right along.

Out west among these farmers

It's singing a busy song.

There's a man by the name of E. N.

French;

Of him let's say a word—

Ninety-six bushels of oats to the acre

Is his record this year, so we've heard.

Judicial Sale

Pursuant to the final Order for Sale, made by His Honor William A. Ross, dated the 28th day of October, 1915, there will be offered for sale by George N. ROSS STREET, RED DEER

Great Britain Has Not Muddled, Says A. Conan Doyle

HE SEES NO CAUSE FOR CARPING PESSIMISM

(By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle)
London, October 31.—The Duke of Wellington once remarked that a deep vein of madness ran through the British character. The noun is perhaps rather harsh, but our best friends have found marked eccentricity in our mental processes.

One of the most curious manifestations is a tendency to excessive and ill-timed self depreciation, not universal, for we have our optimists and even our braggers, but so clamorous at times as to engage the attention of the whole world and completely deceive them as to our real situation and character.

No better illustration of this national tendency could be found than a contrast between the German and British press the last few months. If one were to take them at their face value, one would imagine that Germany was not only confident of the future, but had in the past reason to congratulate herself on the results of her efforts against Great Britain, while, on the British side, one would gather that there was great despondency, and up to now we had no reason to be satisfied with anything we had done in the war.

Yet in our heart of hearts we are as certain of victory as that tomorrow's sun will come and a dispassionate survey will satisfy any student of history that no great war in which our country has ever been engaged has been marked in the same space of time by such triumphant successes as those of the last fourteen months. Our troubles have been those of our allies, our victories have largely been our own. Germany can make a good showing up to date against the coalition. Against Great Britain she has been defeated at every turn.

Now, look at the war of fourteen months. We have annexed the whole great German empire, without the exception of East Africa, and a district in Kamerun; we have swept the German flag, both imperial and mercantile, off the face of the ocean; we have completely sterilized her fleet; we have repelled her serious submarine attack, played out our gas so skillfully that the flux of time shows us stronger, not weaker, in comparison; we have conquered Mesopotamia from the Turks; we have completely repelled their attempted invasion of Egypt; we have helped to save Paris; we have, with French and Belgian assistance, but mainly by our exertions, stopped the advance upon Calais, inflicting a loss of several hundred thousands upon the Germans; we have, by our intervention at Antwerp, helped to extricate the Belgian army; finally, and greatest of all, we have raised an enormous volunteer army, which is large enough to turn the scale between the two nations.

P. O. BOX 314 NORTH RED DEER

Also, September 13, in which for the first time immobile lines were formed, a confession of failure upon the part of the invaders.

There followed the long drawn, scorching action of 11 days, October 12-21, in which no results were obtained and immobility was again enforced. Simultaneously was fought the first battle of Ypres, October 20-November 13, in which the Germans were repelled with very heavy losses, in their repeated attempts to capture that city.

THE FIGHTING IN 1915.

This brought the fighting of 1914 to an end, save for the sharp fight at Festubert, December 19-21, where the British suffered a reverse on the first day, which was equalized by a successful counter attack upon the second.

The campaign of 1915 began with the costly British victory at the Battle of Chappaqua, March 19, involving the permanent capture of the village. There followed the local, but intense, fighting of Hill Sixty, which ended in a complete victory for British at the time, though the garrison was afterward driven out by poison upon May 5.

Then came the second battle of Ypres, from April 22 to May 24, one of the great battles of all time, in which the Germans failed again in their main objective to capture the town and break the line, but did succeed in taking four heavy guns and some prisoners from us, besides gaining about two miles of ground along a front of 20 miles. It may, therefore, be fairly described as a German success. Before this fight had ended a second battle had broken out further down the line—the battle of Richborough (May 9-25), which began by a bloody repulse of the British attack, but ended by a considerable and permanent gain of ground.

There followed the fighting around Hooge, which continued with about equal fortunes all summer, the Germans having marked success July 30-31, while the British won distinct victories June 15-25 and August 9, September 25, which can even now be hardly said to have finished, but which certainly has been a British victory, involving a gain of ground, prisoners and guns.

Such, in bare epitome, is our military record up to date. It is to be remembered that for the first six months (the Germans had a very marked preponderance of numbers, and that in the second half year, when the numbers had been equalized, they had an even more marked preponderance of guns and munitions. By the splendid exertions of the allies the numbers in the west are now in the favor and the munitions at least on an equality. What, then, may we not expect from the future?

THE DANGERS IN PESSIMISM.

The worst of this unreasonable, pessimistic criticism is that it takes the heart out of men who are coping with the war. It makes them feel as if good and bad were alike. Also, it depresses the public and makes them vaguely think that all is wrong when nearly all is right. The conduct and handling of the navy have fortunately been largely immune from carping, but to give an example the continual repetition of such a phrase as "The muddling of the war office." The extraordinary efficiency of our war office has been the surprise of the world. It is muddling when it sent an expeditionary force abroad with such celerity and completeness, with a commissariat which all agreed to be unequalled, and with transport and medical service which are the envy of our allies!

And if we assumed everything, and suppose them at Constantinople, what then? How will they cross the Egyptian desert and meet the guns of a million whom we could line up on the Suez canal? What will it profit them to be strong in Asia Minor by the time the British are pushing their down cast and west and over-thickening allies' lines are pushing inward for Berlin?

The more steady eyes at these fantastic fears the more they shred into mere phantoms of the imagination. The gains of the German expedition are shadowy and distant, the losses are immediate and obvious, and it is the Dardanelles pressure which has drawn them forth.

BRITAIN'S WESTERN CAMPAIGN. On the military side in our campaign of France and Flanders great events have been so close to us, we have confused us so with their successive conquests that one has to cultivate some mental establishment in order to get their proportion and their relation to each other, or to the permanent values of history. So far as the British campaign is concerned, the following summary would be the main be correct:

The campaign began by honorable and inevitable defeat, at Mons, August 23, and Le Cateau, August 24. This was followed by the victory of the Marne, September 6-11, in which the honors rest with our French allies, and the drawn battle of the

Serbian Armies Are Still Intact

London, November 4.—The latest wireless messages received through Sentari say that the cohesion of the Serbian armies has been preserved. Where necessary the troops are making an orderly strategic withdrawal. Rear guard actions are being carried on efficiently, and the armies are being maintained unimpaired. The Serbians are holding the line west of Uskup, and Kuprula (Vele) and along the Babuna mountains. The railway is safe from Saloniki to a point near Kumanovo.

At Kragujevac the Germans found nothing of much value in the arsenal, all the important equipment having been removed. Up to the present the advice says that the Austro-Germans have paid dearly for the advances they have made. No decisive battles have been fought, and such action will not be accepted by the Serbians at the present.

Annual Convention Of Provincial Association W. C. T. U.

The third annual convention of the Alberta W.C.T.U. met in St. John's Presbyterian Church, Medicine Hat, October 1st to 4th, Mrs. L. E. McKinney presiding. One look at our leader's face gave one the impression of repose, and the satisfaction that comes with successful achievement. A second look convinced you that not "Stand at ease" but "Forward march" would be the orders for the coming year. This being the first convention since the successful campaign of July 21st, the keynote of each speaker was "Rejoicing." Even though the women had no vote on prohibition, they felt they had helped to lay foundations, safe and strong upon which their husbands, brothers and sons climbed to cast their ballots. The opening exercises included an inspiring Bible reading by Mrs. Bryant, of Lethbridge, also the introduction of Mrs. Duff Smith, President of Manitoba W.C.T.U. and the convention speaker.

Mrs. I. G. Burbeck, corresponding secretary, gave a very interesting report, in which she stated that it had been three years since the Alberta and Saskatchewan unions had been separated, and the wonderful progress Alberta had made during that time showed the wisdom of each province standing alone. These two provinces lead, like gleaming stars, and point the way for the others to follow.

Comparing reports of 1913 and 1915, showed an increase of unions 31, active members 295, honorary members 23, subscriptions to White Ribbon Bulletin 337. Money received in 1913 was $3,682.00, while for 1915, with less than half the unions heard from up to date of convention, treasury showed $5,483.51. She added that we must work as hard as ever as the enemy was not yet dead. We must be a vigilant committee in the days to come. Mrs. Burbeck has been corresponding secretary for seven years, and found it necessary to resign, much to the regret of co-workers and unions.

The provincial treasurer placed in the hands of each delegate a printed financial statement.

Rev. Coome, who brought greetings from the Temperance and Moral Reform League, was then introduced. He expressed the league's appreciation of the grand work done, saying that he knew for a certainty that it was owing chiefly to the hard work of the Provincial W.C.T.U. that the campaign had been made possible this year. He mentioned a number of things the League was doing, but they were needing financial help, and a midsummer campaign costing fifty thousand dollars, and they had only forty-three thousand.

Before adjourning, Mrs. Duff Smith, who is a remarkably sweet singer, favored us with a solo, "Does Jesus Care."

The report from the L.T.L. secretary was very encouraging, and urged that every union mother an L.T.L. Mrs. Duff Smith gave a talk on this, being the first leader in the work in Winnipeg.

Mrs. McKinney began her address with the words of the familiar hymn, "O for a thousand tongues to sing my great Redeemer's praise." She urged every delegate to take the message to the members at home to renew their consecration, also to thank every union for the way they had helped during the year. Two years ago a resolution was passed recommending an educational campaign. Science is showing the harmful effect of alcohol and the European nations are trying to solve the problem by introducing different measures. We must do more contest work, more L.T.L. work and organizing. We rejoice that we are to have provincial franchise next session. Our watchword for the year is "Organize and Educate."

The presidents of the districts reported good work done, better than any previous year.

At four o'clock the delegates were taken for an automobile drive around the city, meeting at 5th Ave. Methodist church, where a splendid banquet was prepared.

Rev. Tuttle, the pastor of the church, presided at evening meeting, when greetings were brought by Mayor Hawthorne for the city, by the pastor of the Presbyterian church, and the principal of the city schools. All paid high tribute to the organization, and expressed their desire to see women not only entering the political world, but occupying many of the pulpits. These addresses were replied to by Mrs. Cassels, of Calgary.

Saturday's session was opened by reports of superintendents of departments. These showed that each had specialized in her work. Mrs. McKinney urged that each union help these superintendents in every possible way and keep our press work to the front. The provincial union is endeavoring to compile a "Reciter" for Alberta and asked for suitable selections from each union.

Mrs. Daum, of Edmonton, superintendent of foreign speaking peoples, reported sixty families visited and literature in their own languages distributed.

Old district reported distribution of literature in fifty-five different languages, over two thousand leaflets in German being sent to Swift's packing plant. The provincial union gave twenty-five dollars worth of foreign literature to Moral Reform League.

Miss Carson, of Whitlaw, gave a splendid report on L.T.L. work, saying the first requisite was a consecrated leader.

This session closed with a question drawer, conducted by Mrs. Duff Smith. Many perplexing problems were dealt with in a very satisfactory manner, and the leading workers were in favor of working in the future along educational lines, not only among the children and young people, but the older ones as well, particular attention being paid to the intelligent use of the franchise.

On Sunday morning and evening Mrs. McKinney occupied the pulpit of Knox church, and in the afternoon a Sunday School rally was held in the 5th Ave. Methodist Church.

On Sunday evening a mass meeting was held in the Methodist Church, and Mrs. Duff Smith, of Winnipeg, addressed a very large audience. She outlined the temperance movement in Manitoba. The movement in general had been greatly helped by the war, Russia and France taking an advanced stand, with Great Britain following slowly but none the less surely. It was urged that a campaign begin along lines of social purity and against the materialistic tendency of the age. The church should do more than hold a few services if she would keep her grip on the people. More homes should be opened for social gatherings. Adequate accommodation must be furnished for the travelling public when our Liquor Act comes into force.

In closing, Mrs. Smith, who is an exceedingly pleasant speaker, appealed to the people to make their lives worth while, and explained the objects of the W.C.T.U., which, among other things, promotes purity, total abstinence, home protection and peace. It is a society which cultivates self expression in its best and highest form.

The devotional exercises of Monday's session were conducted by Mrs. Duff Smith, who read her favorite chapter, the thirteenth of 1st Corinthians, and urged every woman to honor to live up to its teachings.

Reports showed a good deal of work done along lines usually relegated to Lord's Day Alliance, and a marked increase in work of "flowers, fruit and delicacies" departments.

The President advised that all money paid out by local unions go through the provincial treasury so as to receive credit in annual report.

Miss Carmen, of Chicago, World's Superintendent of metal contest work, on her way to Seattle for national convention, heard of the convention being held and wired greetings.

The election of officers came next in order, and resulted as follows: President—Mrs. L. C. McKinney, Claresholm.

Vice-President—Mrs. I. G. Burbeck, Edmonton.

Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Jas. McDonald.

Recording Secretary—Mrs. R. H. Kent, Medicine Hat.

Treasurer—Mrs. L. G. Craig, Olds.

Secretary—Mrs. C. D. Anderson, Langdon.

L. T. L.—Miss Grace Boyd, Calgary.

The report on scientific temperance by Mrs. McKing showed a great increase of work in this department, one hundred and fifty essays being written in Olds district. Red Dees was awarded one prize.

The following resolutions closed the convention. Resolved:

(1) That we condemn the Alberta Temperance and Moral Reform League for the very efficient way they conducted the recent prohibition campaign.

(2) That we express our gratitude to Premier Sifton for the promise that the franchise would be extended to the women of Alberta on equal terms with men.

(3) That we recognize with alarm the menace of the foreign vote in Alberta, and that we urge the government to restrict the vote of both men and women.

(4) That we view with alarm the progress of the white slave traffic, and that we pledge ourselves to fight it in every way until its extinction.

(5) That we request the government that they provide an examination test on the subject "Temperance" as for other subjects taught in the schools.

On Monday night a grand gold medal contest was held, there being five contestants. The medal was won by a girl from Claresholm.

All the delegates felt greatly inspired and benefitted by being present at this convention.

ONE WOMAN

(The Tribune, New York.)

It is not the brutality but the blunder of the Germans in the execution of Miss Cavell which today offers the astonishment of all. The Teutonic mankind. The woman was guilty of an offence for which death was an extreme but possible punishment. Her guilt was not in question. Even natural indignation should not lead one to overlook the essential fact in the case, which the woman herself recognized.

But granted the guilt, granted the possible warrant of the death penalty, what could have prompted those in authority, while neutral diplomats were asking clemency and the attention of the world was turned toward the case, to hurry the prospective victim before the firing squad, to seek in the cover of night a disguise for the deed and in haste a protection against possible denunciation?

Alive, Miss Cavell was but an official enemy, a German of military rules, dead, dead after summary conviction, dead under circumstances that gave the incident the character of a midnight assassination and the color of an atrocity, she becomes to all men of English blood a martyr and an inspiration to new patriotic devotion.

Writing of Napoleon's act in executing a German, Thomas Carlyle said: "I am not sure but he had better have his last post of artillery, or have his best regiment drowned in the sea, than shoot that poor German book-seller, Palm. It was palpable, murderous injustice, which no man, let him paint an inch thick, could make out to be other. It burnt deep into the hearts of men, it did the work of a hundred years of preaching to the men of that day, it was the day, which day came."

Now let us concede there was no injustice done. Let us agree that a life was forfeit. But what was the profit as against the loss in taking that life. It was simple for the Governor of Belgium to issue the order. It was easy to hurry a helpless woman before a firing squad. The thing was as easy as it was unjust. It was done, German justice was done with an English woman.

But why was it that no German official could permit that only German justice was done? Why was it that the Governor could not recognize that on the next day the thing would be on the lips of a world?

Why could he not realize that for to-morrow and for all to-morrows, as long as the English language runs, his own deed would be remembered with Miss Cavell's?

What is there about the German that prevents his perception of the incident?

The Belgian episode was a final indication of the same blind stupidity in large that in little crops out in the new case. Belgium was conquered in a fortnight, German military power had reason with a little people in the briefest time, but for how many generations of men will this tale be told and horror and bring down scorn and loathing upon those other generations of Germans?

There is something almost pathetic in the German dullness to the things that move the world. It begs, whines, pleads for the good will and the approval of neutral mankind. It stands almost as a suppliant for the alms of approval of other races. But in the same moment, without warning, without reason, without anything but an incomprehensible stupidity and folly, it does something that shocks the moral sense of the humanity, of men and women the world over.

It is easy to rage at this latest incident. There is in the helplessness and nobility of a gallant English woman something that appeals to all that is chivalrous, all that is gentle and kindly in the nature of men of all breeds and tribes. There is an instinctive desire to exert all the strains of language and of action and join in a general denunciation, a universal crusade against an inhumanity so gross, a brutality so incredible.

Yet such an emotion must be transient. Since history began to record such as this have carried the death warrant to the man and method responsible. From one end of Britain to the other, today, men are enlisting because of Miss Cavell's fate. Those who faintly whispered peace are putting away the thought and blushing for shame at the suggestion.

The thing is like the Zeppelin raids, it is like the Louvain slaughter, it is like the Lusitania massacre. The wrongs done to the woman and children of a race do not terrify the men. They only serve to rouse the spirit, to kindle the flame of our own countrymen. The facts are clear, the facts, be it said again, do not of illegality, but of inhumanity, surpassing brutality, unvarying in its nature, again and again in these columns the faith has been expressed that German defeat was inevitable because the German army was a machine, a machine of the most perfect kind, a machine of the most perfect kind, a machine of the most perfect kind.

There are days when the magnificence of the victories of German arms has made it seem as if the machine of the most perfect kind, a machine of the most perfect kind, a machine of the most perfect kind.

No Elections Until One Year After War Ends

Ottawa, November 1.—A conference is being held today between Sir Robert Borden and Sir Wilfrid Laurier dealing with the question of the extension of the term of the present parliament. Both leaders are opposed to war election and little difficulty is expected in arriving at a mutually satisfactory arrangement for the present administration to remain in office without an appeal to the electors until a satisfactory peace in Europe is signed.

YEAR AFTER PEACE TREATY

It is believed that the agreement, which will be ratified by both the Canadian and Imperial parliaments, will extend the life of the present parliament until one year after the signing of peace terms, although an extension will be possible any time after the peace treaty is ratified. Sir Wilfrid does not want an election, nor does he want to remain in the turmoil of public life. Some of the Liberal leaders except those from Quebec and such men as Turill of Saskatchewan wished a war contest.

NO WAR ELECTION.

They urged very strongly that no extension be granted, but were overruled by others. There will be no war election. This will be agreed upon by the two leaders today. The main features of the agreement may not be made public until legislation dealing with the question is submitted to parliament in January.

One of Germany's Super-Submarines Caught Shortly After Leaving Port

Liverpool, November 3.—The Daily Post publishes a report of the capture of one of Germany's latest super-submarines, 270 feet long, and carrying, in addition to torpedo tubes, four guns of fairly large calibre. The submarine was launched at Stettin in a fortnight and the Post states that within a few hours after leaving her base she was caught in one of the "traps" we have so skilfully laid for her. She was somewhere in the German ocean.

Sport Brevities

Dr. William Gilbert Grace, the famous English cricketer, is dead at the age of 67 years. His name has been almost synonymous with the great English game for the past half century during which time he played on English eleven against Australian cricketers on many occasions. He was writing on his favorite pastime, his life and his publications being "Cricketing Reminiscences and Personal Recollections."

For the first time in history a khaki aggregation will make a bid for the Allan Cup, emblematic of the Canadian amateur hockey championship. The patriotic settable will be drawn from the 68th battalion now in the stalling in Regina, and will include stars from its year's Moose Jaw, Melville and Regina teams.

Fred McCulloch, star goal-tender of the Regina hockey team for the past two seasons, has decided to cast in his lot with the Pacific Coast professionals. He will guard the nets for Pete Muldoon's Seattle aggregation.

Pts. Nivin, of the Princess Pats, the first of a score of Calgary footballers to return from the front, was accorded a great reception by his colleagues on his arrival in the southern city on Thursday last.

Richard De Palma today holds the distinction of having travelled faster in a motor car than any other man in the world. Before a small crowd the Italian drove his big 12-cylinder Sunbeam around the two-mile oval at Sheepshead Bay at a rate of 116 miles an hour.

Dario Hesta won the 100-mile automobile race for the Harkness golf challenge cup and $5,000 in cash at the Sheepshead Bay speedway track. His time for the distance, 56:55.71, established a new American record and an average of 105.39 miles an hour.

The Hamilton Tigers clinched the "Big Four" rugby championship on Saturday last, when they defeated the Ottawa Senators into camp by a 19 to 5 score.

Jess Villard, world's heavyweight champion pugilist, has agreed to defend the title against Les Foreman in New Orleans next March. His opponent will be either Frank Moran or Bill Colley.

Jim Clymen, who during the past season managed the Toronto International Baseball Club, has signed a two-year contract to lead the Louisville team of the American Association. This announcement comes as a great disappointment to Wm. J. McCallery and the Toronto moguls, who made great efforts to retain the "Derby Day" for another season.

John Prentiss Poe, Jr., a famous Princeton football player in the early '90s, was killed September 22 last while fighting as a private in the British army along the northern boundary of France, according to word received from the London war bureau by cables in Baltimore.

Calgary Calhies captured the Herald Cup and soccer championship of the city by defeating the 56th Battalion aggregation 1-0 on Wednesday.

The 22 Rifle Club, among the members of the 35th C.A.H., commenced operations on Wednesday last. Lack of practice was perceptibly evidenced in the scores made none of which were phenomenal, and only a few were over 50. The highest carried off the medal for the highest with 41 out of a possible 50.

A basketball league is also being organized among the members of the 35th, the games to be played on Friday evening.

Deaths in Lacombe District

Mrs. James Wright, after a short illness, died on Friday last at the Lacombe Hospital. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon, the service being held in the Methodist Church. Rev. Mr. Corcoran of Blackfalds, assisted by Rev. E. T. Stratford, officiating. The church was filled with hundreds of friends of the bereaved family, nearly everyone in the district turning out to pay their last respects to the deceased.

On Thursday evening last, Mr. John Morris, a well known and highly respected farmer of the Lacombe district, died suddenly at his home north-west of town. Mr. Morris was in his usual health on Thursday, and worked as usual, but in the evening, after finishing his chores, he came into the house and, sitting down on a chair, expired immediately. Heart disease was the cause of his death.

THREE BRITISHERS KILLED SIX GERMANS

Canadian, Irishman and Scot Fought to a Finish With Twice Number of Huns

The following incidents were related by Private J. E. MacRae, of the 7th Seaforth Highlanders, to Corporal E. S. Mitchell, Royal Montreal Regiment, who were both wounded and taken to Gardenhurst Hospital, Bexley, England:

"This incident shows how three Britishers were more than a match for six Germans, and how a Canadian accounted for four of them, though badly wounded before he accounted for the last two. On this occasion three men, all suffering more or less from gas poisoning, a 7th Seaforth Highlander, MacRae, a 18th Battalion Canadian Scottish, and a Dublin Fusilier, got away from their respective regiments, and about dusk were trying to find their regiments. Without any warning they stumbled into a small party of six Germans entrenched. They were probably a party of scouts or a listening patrol.

A Terrific Struggle

"The Germans were as much surprised as our chaps, but opened fire at once, the first hitting MacRae's rifle on the butt, breaking it, and causing it to fall out of his hands. He (MacRae) stooped down and saw a Canadian bayonet on the ground. He picked it up. The German thrust his rifle into MacRae's chest and was about to pull the trigger, but he seized the barrel by his left hand and pushed it away from him, the bullet entering his forearm and inflicting a serious wound. MacRae, plucking up his courage, raised his rifle, using the bayonet as a dagger, stabbed the German in the head, killing him instantly. The Dublin Fusilier shot a man, but was killed, a bullet entering his brain. The Canadian, grabbing his rifle by the barrel and using it as a club, gave a mighty swing and hit one of the Germans on the head, smashing his head in like an eggshell. Continuing the swing, he treated another likewise. He was then badly wounded in the shoulder, but looking around he saw one of the remaining Germans on the point of shooting MacRae, who was crouching down. The Canadian, firing from the hip, blew the German's head off.

Bayoneted the German

"The remaining German then put up his hands saying 'Me good comrade, no shoot,' but the Canadian, saying 'You—', I'll comrade you, plunged forward with his rifle with so much force that the bayonet stuck several inches into the German's back. By this time the two Jews were weak from loss of blood, but bandaging each other up as best they could, they stumbled and staggered to the dressing station near St. Jean. The doctor, when they were held, told them they had better get on farther as the station was being shelled. They had only gone a few hundred yards when a shell burst into the station, blowing the doctor and wounded to bits. They finally managed to get to Ypres, but as all the dressing stations had so many bad cases to attend to, they had to go without being dressed. They got into an ambulance starting for Ypres, but when they were going through Ypres an ambulance just in front of them, full of wounded, was hit by a shell and blown to bits. They finally arrived at Poperinghe, and getting into a Red Cross train had their wounds dressed, and started for Boulogne.

Boy's Mistake

P. F. Fogarty of the Northern Pacific railway was talking in Portland about the $100,000 order for new equipment that he has just placed. "This is the largest order, the largest of its kind on record," he said, "is prosperity. Real prosperity. Not the kind young Hunk encountered."

"Young Cornelius Hunk was about to try his fortune in New York."

"Now, Corney," his old grandmother said, "don't desert the narrow path of righteousness when you get to that rich city where money is so plentiful that they say the streets are even paved with gold."

"Hunk promised his grandmother to behave himself, and in due course he reached New York. He got out at the station and started down Seventh avenue, when he saw, glittering in the gutter a bright ten-dollar gold piece.

"He picked up the coin joyfully, and was about to place it in his purse, when a blind beggar caught his eye. A wave of genuine sympathy surged through him and he handed the beggar his rich find."

"Here, take it," he said. "I can see 'em, you can't."—New York Times.

Owed Recognition to Emperor. Bell had little success at the Philadelphia exhibition, and his invention would have passed unnoticed, even had it not been for Dom Pedro, the emperor of Brazil. For the story was he indebted to the Revue Scientifique. Dom Pedro was inspecting the exhibition, attended by his suite, when he came across Graham Bell, whom he remembered as a teacher in a school of deaf mutes. Dom Pedro came to his stand and asked him to "set his machine going."

A wire crossed the room from wall to wall. Dom Pedro stood at the receiver and Bell at the transmitter. No one understood exactly what was happening, when suddenly the emperor lifted his head dramatically and shouted, in absolute amazement: "It's talking!" The scientists in Dom Pedro's suite rushed to verify this extraordinary announcement, and the more they knew of electricity, the less they would believe their ears. The next day the newspapers were filled with the news,

Rocky Mountain House is just coming into prominence as a hunting resort. Last Friday evening a party arrived from Gleichen, consisting of C. J. Brae, the mayor of the town, W. H. James, H. A. Ferguson, and Dr. McIntyre. The party were entertained during the evening by Councillor Kirby, and the following day they left for the west, accompanied by J. C. Mooney. The members of this party were unanimous in declaring that Rocky Mountain House was a town distinctly in a class by itself. A party from St. Peter, consisting of F. D. Carder, J. J. Miller, J. Cullen and J. H. Moore, are now in the district in search of big game. In addition to these many local parties are already on the hunting grounds.—Guide
